Early 1900s

Organized medicine begins

1912

Theodore Roosevelt campaigns on the issue of mandatory health insurance cost of health care increases relative to other sectors and medical attention becomes increasingly more difficult for the middle class to afford

1920

1930's

The Great Depression brings emphasis on offering government-based benefits to Americans

1940's

During World War II, employers begin to offer health insurance coverage to compensate for wage controls placed on employers

1950s

Tax incentives given to employers offering health insurance plans propagating employer-based health system

1960s

President Lyndon Johnson signs Medicare into law providing comprehensive health coverage for individuals age 65 and over

1970s-1980's

Cost of health care exponentially increases. Health Maintenance Organization Act to help reduce costs. Health care makes a move to become more privatized

1990s-2000s

cost of health care rises at a rate double the rate of inflation. Medicare's sustainability questioned

2010

Affordable Care Act